The Judith Trust is a charitable trust named after Judith Lawrence

Judith has both a learning disability and mental ill-health.

The Judith Trust works to improve the quality of life for people with similar needs to Judith.

It does this through paying people to do research

Talking to people who make decisions in Government and other organisations
And letting everybody know if anything is going to change.

The Judith Trust would like to get people with learning disabilities and mental health issues together to give some advice.
